"I treat patients as individuals who have unique medical needs. It is paramount to develop a partnership with patients based on open communication to help them understand their medical condition and for me to understand their needs. By having patients as equal and active participants in their care, a treatment plan that is best catered to them can be developed to achieve the most favorable outcome."

Tushar M. Ranchod, MD

Undergraduate: Stanford University
Medical School: University of California, San Francisco
Residency: Scheie Eye Institute, University of

Languages Spoken: English
Hobbies: Poetry, Cooking, Sculpting, 3D CAD modeling

"I want my patients to know that they're getting the best care and to understand their retinal condition and treatment plan. That means providing clear explanations and building trust. Many patients require ongoing treatment, and I love sharing personal moments in addition to providing the best care possible."
